Pure Food Laws Theme For Wilson In His Talks

Supports Harvey Wiley and Criticises the Experts.

Sioux City, Ia., Sept. 18.—Firm support for Dr. Harvey W. Wiley in his controversy over the enforcement of the pure food laws of the country, stood out prominently in a speech by Governor Woodrow Wilson.

The governor drew attention to what he conceived to be the ineffectuality of boards of experts, such as the board of chemists established under the administration of President Roosevelt. He used it as an illustration of his objection to a commission or board of experts to handle either the tariff or the trust problems of the day.

Governor Wilson voiced for the first time his objection to the tariff board idea as contained in the Republican as well as the Progressive platforms, declaring it would mean a "postponement of tariff legislation."

Two Cities Plan to Take Over Street Railway Lines.

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 18.—Steps are well under way for the cities of Duluth and Superior, Wis., to purchase the streetcar company which operates in both cities. The action of the city council of Duluth instructing the city legal department to begin action to take over the street railway property followed the strike, which has been attended by serious rioting and the refusal of the company to arbitrate. A special election will be called in Duluth under the present plans to vote upon the municipal ownership of the company's property.

Mayor Konkel of Superior has told Manager Warren of the company that if the strike is not settled soon the city will take the property from him. Under the Wisconsin state law the corporation can be taken over by the city.

Government Attorneys Present to Court What Purports to Be an Original Agreement by Which Perkins, McCormick and Deering Formed a Voting Trust Which Put Them in Absolute Control.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Government attorneys presented in the government's anti-trust suit against the International Harvester company what purported to be an original agreement by which George W. Perkins, Cyrus H. McCormick and Charles Deering formed a "voting trust" which placed them in absolute control of the $140,000,000 corporation.

The agreement, dated Aug. 12, 1902, was for 10 years. It expired only a few weeks ago. It was introduced in testimony to show that these three men had had turned over to them all the stock so they had the sole voting power of the corporation.

Another exhibit purported to show that Mr. Perkins was chairman of the corporation's finance committee and that of the six members of that company four were directors in the steel corporation and members of the steel corporation's finance committee, as follows: E. H. Gary, Nor-

Sleuths And Bloodhounds On the Trail Of Fugitives

Bandits Who Held Up Memphis Special Being Pursued.

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 18.—Government officials left here with bloodhounds to pick up the trail of the two masked bandits who looted two sacks of registered mail on the "Memphis special" of the Southern railway. A posse is already in pursuit.

The amount of loot taken is not known, but postoffice officials fear it was considerable. It is believed that many of the registered packages contained money and jewelry.

The train arrived here a few minutes late. None of the passengers had been molested and only a few realized that the train had been held up. The robbers did their work quickly escaped in the woods.

The men flagged the train near Stevenson, Ala., and when it came to a standstill the engineer and fireman were compelled to leave the locomotive at the point of revolvers. The bandits broke down the door of the mail car. Four mail clerks were tied together and piled in a heap in one corner of the car. Then they were covered with sacks of mail weighing several hundred pounds.

Real Sharp Is Note To Nicaragua

Uncle Sam Will Not Tolerate Restoration of Zelayan Policies.

Washington, Sept. 18.—The first official statement of the policy of the United States in the Nicaraguan situation was issued at the state department in the form of a text of a note presented to the Nicaraguan government by United States Minister Weitzel at Managua, on telegraphic instructions from Huntington Wilson, acting secretary of state.

The purpose of the United States in Nicaragua, the note asserts, is to guard the American legation, keep open communications in the republic and to protect American life and property from injury and destruction.

Of greater significance, however, are the declarations that the United States will not countenance a restoration of the "corrupt and barbarous" order of things which prevailed under the tyrannical rule of the former dictator—President Zelaya. General Mena is branded by the note as a man who is attempting to impose upon Nicaragua the destructive regime of Zelaya and is castigated in the severest terms.

POLICE TIP IS DENIED BY MEN

Louie and Gyp Say Arrest Was Result of Mere Chance.

New York, Sept. 18.—Lefty Louie Rosenberg and Gyp the Blood Horowitz denied that they had given the police a tip as to their hiding place in Glendale, Queens borough. They told their lawyer, Charles F. Wahle, that their capture was the result of mere chance and that if Mrs. Rosenberg had not been seen by a detective who lived in Glendale and who happened to know her well they would still be at liberty.

In their talk with counsel Rosenberg and Horowitz reiterated their denials that they had any part in the killing of Rosenthal. They said that the identification of them made by Louis Kresse, the waiter, in court was a joke. "We were not anywhere near the Metropole," said Rosenberg, "and of course we were not in the gray automobile where Kresse says he saw us."

Oil Combine Not Dissolved Is the Claim Now Urged

Testimony of President Bushnell of the Buckeye Pipe Line.

New York, Sept. 18.—That the Standard Oil combine never was dissolved by the government decree, and that the same control over subsidiaries still exists to all intents and purposes, was emphasized here when D. S. Bushnell, president of the Buckeye Pipe Line company, testified that the officers and employees of the Standard are still in control of his concern.

Bushnell said further that he owned but one share of the Buckeye company stock when he was made director and president, and that the remaining four directors owned but one share each, yet John D. Rockefeller and the other Standard heads who owned the big end of the stock were entirely willing that these single share owners should entirely manage the affairs of the Buckeye company.

This testimony was given before the referee, who is hearing Standard Oil-Waters Pierce litigation.

SUBMITS TO AN INTERVIEW

Also of the Opinion That Conservative Business Interests and the Laboring Men Are Unfavorably Disposed Toward Governor Wilson Because of His Views on Tariff Revision.

Beverly, Mass., Sept. 18.—Encouraged by telegrams from every section of the country, including his own state of Ohio, President Taft interested himself in the general political situation.

Bumper crops, an increasing demand for labor, booms in the iron and steel business, increased building operations and the great increase in the deposits in the savings banks the president believes are reassuring the recent feeling of unrest throughout the country. The president insisted that this prosperity is due in great measure to the reassuring of the business interests through his vetoing of the tariff bills passed by the Democratic congress.

Mr. Taft builds great hopes on the "silent vote," which he believes will be against Colonel Roosevelt, because of his third-term ambitions and the association with his campaign of certain well-known millionaires, and against Governor Wilson because of his views on the tariff revision.

"I am not an optimist," said Mr. Taft, smilingly, "but I think we will have a quiet vote of the conservative business interests and the thinking laboring men on election day which will surprise them."

"There are indications that Roosevelt will draw as large a vote from the Democrats as from the Republican ranks in many localities. This is the vote of those with Socialistic tendencies which would go to Wilson if it did not go to Roosevelt."

Taft's Prediction.

President Taft sent word to Chairman Hilles in New York that the national situation would hourly improve and that he was exceedingly confident of re-election. The president wound up his message with this remark over the long distance telephone: "You will find before election day that Roosevelt will run a bad third and that the Republican party in this fight will nail Roosevelt's skin to the barn door."

The president and his campaigners are relying upon arbitrary figures for their calculations as to the support Mr. Roosevelt is to receive on election day in all of the states. They believe these arbitrary figures will give President Taft 290 votes in the electoral college when only 266 are necessary to re-elect him.

The Wilson campaigners insist that from all their reports their candidate is to receive 9,000,000 votes, and Taft would receive 5,000,000 and Roosevelt 2,000,000.

FOR the present at least the giants of the sea lead those of the land in one dimension. The Imperator, the longest ship afloat, if set up on end alongside the Woolworth building in New York would overtop it by 150 feet. That is to say, the building is 750 feet high, and the Hamburg-American liner, recently launched, is 900 feet long. ANONYMOUS OWNERS.

Among the many "reforms" of these days of reform, which is a radical departure from the long existing order of things is that relating to the publication of newspapers and periodicals.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock has already issued instructions for carrying into effect the new newspaper and periodical law, first returns under which must be made by October 1.

The law requires that publishers shall file on the first days of April and October of each year, both with the Postmaster-General and with the local postmaster, under penalty of denial of the use of the mails, a sworn statement of the names and addresses of the owner, publisher, editor, managing editor and business manager of their newspapers and periodicals.

Religious, fraternal, temperance and scientific publications are excepted. For a corporation, the names of the holders of more than 1 per cent. of the stocks, bonds or other securities must be given, and in the case of daily newspapers a statement of the average paid circulation for the preceding six months is required.

All editorial or other reading matter appearing in a newspaper or magazine for the publication of which pay is accepted or promised must be marked "advertisement," under penalty of a fine of not less than $5 or more than $500.

"Although this law was not favored by the Postoffice department," said the Postmaster-General, "it will be administered faithfully and impartially. In framing the act Congress doubtless had in mind the leading daily newspapers, but it will affect also nearly 18,000 weeklies. Many of these publications are having a hard struggle for existence and will find the making of returns a considerable burden."

One of the greatest difficulties now encountered in the enforcement of the law relating to the second class mail privilege is that the Postoffice Department is compelled by law to make inquiry into so many aspects of the private business of publishers.

This gives rise to the complaint—ill-founded, in my opinion—that the Government interferes needlessly with the privileges of the press.

This new law so soon now to become actually operative is but another one of those laudable efforts of the authorities to disclose the identity of "the man behind the gun."

The object being of course to furnish the reading public with all the facts so that it may know just who it is who promulgates facts, theories and advice on matters political and governmental in the hope of moulding public opinion and directing public action.

Much of the alleged statement of facts which appear in the press of the nation would be discounted considerably or at least taken "with a grain of salt," if along with that the public was advised just who was back of the publication.

Men with an ax to grind should not be able to hide behind a dummy editor or a dummy company and control the policy of publications, newspapers or others. Such men have a right to go into the business of publishing newspapers and periodicals but the fact that they are doing so should be given to the public.

Whether the new law is broad enough to cover every effort to hide, cannot of course, be known until it has been in actual effect for a period. If the men with selfish interests at stake find a method to evade and devise a hiding place the law should be supplemented so as to reach them.

The people have come to realize that too long they have been getting their facts and advice on matters political and governmental from anonymous letter writers, and they now demand, rightfully too, to know who it is addressing them.

There is nothing more cowardly than the anonymous letter writer and the man who owns or controls a publication and shapes its policy so as to mislead his readers, all the time hiding his identity and his real purpose and interest, is nothing else.

Good Advice for Any Young Mother

By E. M. Aldrich, Sabula, Ia.

Let the boy alone. His father and mother should join their interests in other things, working together and keeping up a continuous flow of bright conversation. They should join forces in beautifying the home and surroundings and their own personal appearance.

Talk of your flowers, your home or of current events. Choose governmental questions or the abundant blessings of the present year—always something along developing lines. Speak always with enthusiasm and abiding interest. Let your tones ever express faith and sincerity in the success of lines.

Never say a word to the boy about not working, neither of his faults, nor his weaknesses, and by your power he will be lifted and strengthened though he is not conscious of the fact, and soon you will see a change in your boy. It will take some time, but he will rise.

Then watch him develop. If you believe in prayer go separately to the secret room and ask Him to do for your child what you cannot do.

A pair of thrushes once built their nest near my door and one of the young birds was so large and heavy that it could not fly. Its wings were not strong enough to lift the body and the bird fell to the ground. The parent birds were dismayed, as a cat was there. I took the birdling and put it in the center of a clump of lilac bushes. There they defended it and it soon learned to fly.

Poetry For Today

AFTER THE DAY'S WORK.

The night is cool and still and clear,
There are no clouds to hide the stars,
And faintly from afar I hear
The roar of swiftly moving cars.
The last sweet scents of summer seem
To linger in the autumn air,
And in the north there is a gleam,
As if a sun were rising there.

I hear no harsh words of command,
No fretful driver plies the lash;
I see no grasping, greedy hand
Stretched forth to clutch elusive cash.

I have not won rewards that they
Who sigh for wealth would wish to claim,
But I have labored through the day
With splendid hopes and free from blame.

Without complaint I've done my best;
I've dimmed no eye with any tear,
And wrung no sigh from any breast.
The night is cool and still and clear.

C. H. & D. Train Kills Xenian

The morning passenger train on the C. H. & D. railroad ran down and instantly killed John Coates, aged 65, at Xenia Tuesday morning, nearly every bone in his body being crushed.

Coates was walking along the track near the Pennsylvania tracks, and hearing the train whistle, mistook it for the Pennsylvania, and stepped directly in front of it.

Coates is survived by a wife and eight children. He was employed on the Pennsylvania railroad.

VIEWS OF OTHERS

EXECUTIVE SESSIONS.

The practice of public officials meeting in executive sessions breeds suspicion of those officers and a distrust of the parties to which they belong. The time has gone by when the executive session could be used as a cloak for more or less honorable transactions and if the public official today desires to steer a course clear of well founded criticism he will avoid these sessions as he would a pestilence.

There may be a few isolated cases when the public weal demands that certain legislative or executive bodies should hold secret meetings. Under conditions of great public moment, when anarchy threatens or the civil authority is imperilled, then a secret session of legislative bodies might be justified, to best consider what course should be taken. At other times when appointive officers are being chosen, and a public meeting would lead simply to confusion and the obstruction of business, it might be justified to close the doors.

Yet the secret session should be called only as a last resort and when it appeared that by no other method could satisfactory results be obtained. The ordinary public body has no license to call an executive session and it lays itself open to criticism and to a well-founded distrust of its official acts every time it bars the public from its meetings.

Honor does not fear the light. Only evil and corruption lurks in darkness and slinks behind locked doors. No system of graft or public corruption was ever conceived in a meeting open to the public nor were schemes to steal the public revenues hatched out in the open where anyone was free to hear and to criticize.

Public officials, in history at least, are the servants of the people who place them in their high positions. Consequently they can have no business of which the people are not entitled to hear. Their official acts are simply those of a servant. A servant cannot rank above his master and that servant's acts should be plain to the sight and to the criticism of the master. The moment the public official forgets this fact, that moment the interests of his constituents suffer and the way is paved for corruption and vice.

In view of the reforms, sweeping and revolutionary in their character, which have carried this country with in the last few years and which threatens to change the very framework of our laws and institutions, the officials should see the handwriting on the wall. The executive session, long the tool of corruptions and grafters, is doomed. The day is coming when the recall will be adopted and applied to the man, who dares to thwart the will of the people and to attempt to keep official proceedings secret. There is no excuse for the secret session and unless the officials act in time, the people will demand an accounting from them.—Springfield Sun.

EFFECTS OF AMENDMENTS

RECENTLY ADOPTED

All voters will be affected considerably by some of the amendments that passed at the constitutional amendment election. Following is a list with explanation of the most important that will affect local interests:

Under the new constitution the resident judge is to serve six years and is to be elected in November 1914.

When 10 per cent of the county's voters petition to combine the probate court with the common pleas court, the question of combining shall be decided at an election.

The adoption of the amendment to abolish justices of the peace does not affect Pickaway county. This law applies only to the largest cities where municipal courts, other than mayor's courts, have been or may be established.

The amendment authorizing each school district to organize its own board applies only to city districts, and in no way affects any county district.

Amendment 32 to tax state and municipal bonds, inheritances, incomes, franchises, production of oil, gas, coal and other minerals, also provides that no taxes can be worked out on roads.

The jury system in civil cases is left open to such a change that nine men instead of twelve may return a verdict.

The primary elections amendment does away with further political conventions in Ohio, except in small villages or township districts. Under it all elected officials from the governor of the state down, hereafter will be nominated at state-wide primaries; furthermore, the people will always vote their preference on United States senators.

The taxation proposals will restore state and local bonds to taxation and will make possible the taxing of incomes, inheritances and franchises. It will raise the personal property exemption to $500.

The home rule proposal will give cities hereafter complete power to choose their own form of government, the right to enact laws not directly in conflict with state laws and own and operate all manner of public utilities, including street railway lines.

The liquor license proposal will put all saloons under a license system; will reduce the number of saloons in the state by about 2500; will prevent brewery-owned saloons and will keep immoral characters out of the saloon business.

The civil service proposal, although not included in the "big nine" of the constitutional amendments, upon which the early figures are tabulated, is considered to have ridden through easily. By many persons this is regarded as equal in importance to any proposal submitted. It makes compulsory the civil service in all public appointive offices in Ohio, from state office-holders down to the municipal. Such officials will make appointive hereafter only by competitive examination and their positions it will make permanent during good behavior. It is thought that the success of this proposal will spell the end of the spoils system in Ohio.—Exchange.

ANONYMOUS OWNERS.

Among the many "reforms" of these days of reform, which is a radical departure from the long existing order of things is that relating to the publication of newspapers and periodicals.

Postmaster-General Hitchcock has already issued instructions for carrying into effect the new newspaper and periodical law, first returns under which must be made by October 1.

The law requires that publishers shall file on the first days of April and October of each year, both with the Postmaster-General and with the local postmaster, under penalty of denial of the use of the mails, a sworn statement of the names and addresses of the owner, publisher, editor, managing editor and business manager of their newspapers and periodicals.

Religious, fraternal, temperance and scientific publications are excepted. For a corporation, the names of the holders of more than 1 per cent. of the stocks, bonds or other securities must be given, and in the case of daily newspapers a statement of the average paid circulation for the preceding six months is required.

All editorial or other reading matter appearing in a newspaper or magazine for the publication of which pay is accepted or promised must be marked "advertisement," under penalty of a fine of not less than $5 or more than $500.

"Although this law was not favored by the Postoffice department," said the Postmaster-General, "it will be administered faithfully and impartially. In framing the act Congress doubtless had in mind the leading daily newspapers, but it will affect also nearly 18,000 weeklies. Many of these publications are having a hard struggle for existence and will find the making of returns a considerable burden."

One of the greatest difficulties now encountered in the enforcement of the law relating to the second class mail privilege is that the Postoffice Department is compelled by law to make inquiry into so many aspects of the private business of publishers.

This gives rise to the complaint—ill-founded, in my opinion—that the Government interferes needlessly with the privileges of the press.

This new law so soon now to become actually operative is but another one of those laudable efforts of the authorities to disclose the identity of "the man behind the gun."

The object being of course to furnish the reading public with all the facts so that it may know just who it is who promulgates facts, theories and advice on matters political and governmental in the hope of moulding public opinion and directing public action.

Much of the alleged statement of facts which appear in the press of the nation would be discounted considerably or at least taken "with a grain of salt," if along with that the public was advised just who was back of the publication.

Men with an ax to grind should not be able to hide behind a dummy editor or a dummy company and control the policy of publications, newspapers or others. Such men have a right to go into the business of publishing newspapers and periodicals but the fact that they are doing so should be given to the public.

Whether the new law is broad enough to cover every effort to hide, cannot of course, be known until it has been in actual effect for a period. If the men with selfish interests at stake find a method to evade and devise a hiding place the law should be supplemented so as to reach them.

The people have come to realize that too long they have been getting their facts and advice on matters political and governmental from anonymous letter writers, and they now demand, rightfully too, to know who it is addressing them.

There is nothing more cowardly than the anonymous letter writer and the man who owns or controls a publication and shapes its policy so as to mislead his readers, all the time hiding his identity and his real purpose and interest, is nothing else.

Poetry For Today

AFTER THE DAY'S WORK.

The night is cool and still and clear.
There are no clouds to hide the stars,
And faintly from afar I hear
The roar of swiftly moving cars.

The last sweet scents of summer seem
To linger in the autumn air,
And in the north there is a gleam,
As if a sun were rising there.

I hear no harsh words of command,
No fretful driver plies the lash;
I see no grasping, greedy hand
Stretched forth to clutch elusive cash.

I have not won rewards that they
Who sigh for wealth would wish to claim,
But I have labored through the day
With splendid hopes and free from blame.

Without complaint I've done my best;
I've dimmed no eye with any tear,
And wrung no sigh from any breast
The night is cool and still and clear.

C. H. & D. Train Kills Xenian

The morning passenger train on the C. H. & D. railroad ran down and instantly killed John Coates, aged 65, at Xenia Tuesday morning, nearly every bone in his body being crushed.

Coates was walking along the track near the Pennsylvania tracks, and hearing the train whistle, mistook it for the Pennsylvania, and stepped directly in front of it.

Coates is survived by a wife and eight children. He was employed on the Pennsylvania railroad.

EXECUTIVE SESSIONS.

The practice of public officials meeting in executive sessions breeds suspicion of those officers and a distrust of the parties to which they belong. The time has gone by when the executive session could be used as a cloak for more or less honorable transactions and if the public official today desires to steer a course clear of well founded criticism he will avoid these sessions as he would a pestilence.

There may be a few isolated cases when the public weal demands that certain legislative or executive bodies should hold secret meetings. Under conditions of great public moment, when anarchy threatens or the civil authority is imperilled, then a secret session of legislative bodies might be justified, to best consider what course should be taken. At other times when appointive officers are being chosen, and a public meeting would lead simply to confusion and the obstruction of business, it might be justified to close the doors.

Yet the secret session should be called only as a last resort and when it appeared that by no other method could satisfactory results be obtained. The ordinary public body has no license to call an executive session and it lays itself open to criticism and to a well-founded distrust of its official acts every time it bars the public from its meetings.

Honor does not fear the light. Only evil and corruption lurks in darkness and slinks behind locked doors. No system of graft or public corruption was ever conceived in a meeting open to the public nor were schemes to steal the public revenues hatched out in the open where anyone was free to hear and to criticize.

Good Advice for Any Young Mother

By E. M. Aldrich, Sebula, Ia.

the best things and in a spirit that dares to aim for success along these lines.

Never say a word to the boy about not working, neither of his faults, nor his weaknesses, and by your power he will be lifted and strengthened though he is not conscious of the fact, and soon you will see a change in your boy. It will take some time, but he will rise.

Then watch him develop. If you believe in prayer go separately to the secret room and ask Him to do for your child what you cannot do.

A pair of thrushes once built their nest near my door and one of the young birds was so large and heavy that it could not fly. Its wings were not strong enough to lift the body and the bird fell to the ground. The parent birds were dismayed, as a cat was there. I took the birdling and put it in the center of a clump of lilac bushes. There they defended it and it soon learned to fly.

GRABS WESTERN RIVER $50,000 AT STAKE

The possession of water rights worth $50,000,000 may lead to a prolonged legal battle between two Western States, in which railroads may line up as well as extensive agriculturists, unless the present filings accepted long since are upheld immediately by the government.

Wyoming, in reality, is trying to grab a $50,000 river from Nebraska. It is the biggest river, except the Columbia, between the Missouri and the Pacific Coast, and upon its waters depend the prosperity of the entire western end of Nebraska. Wyoming is not simply after title to the river, but intends actually to take the water from between the banks and leave a dry watercourse extending three-quarters of the way across this entire state. Gov. Aldrich of Nebraska, the confederated commercial clubs of the state, Union Pacific Railroad and various other bodies have joined in an effort to stop the thief, and representatives have been rushed off to Washington to interest the Federal Government in behalf of the present owners of the stream.

May Cause Platte River to Go Dry.

The river, which is in such danger is the North Platte. Of the North and South Platte rivers, which combine at this point, the northern branch brings three or four times as much water to the confluence. With the North Platte diverted to other uses, the present Platte River, from the western end of the state to Platts mouth, on the Missouri will be but a dry tract of sand.

Wyoming claims that that state is in the right in the action which it is taking, and points to the fact that it is remaining strictly within the law while taking possession of the water. And there is no denying that fact, either.

North Platte River takes its rise in Wyoming and for several hundred miles flows through that state. Most of its water comes from the numerous streams which pour down Wyoming mountains and find their way into the North Platte before it enters Nebraska.

Nebraska Got Careless of Rights.

Some years ago there came a change in the climatic conditions of Western Nebraska, and, instead of dry seasons, sufficient rain fell to mature the crops. So the settlers did not use the river water. They did not have to irrigate to produce crops. Consequently they permitted their irrigation ditches to deteriorate and become almost unusable. They slept on their rights, in other words. And, under governmental law, these water rights must be used if they are to remain in force.

Then again did Wyoming farmers, who had been living by dry farming methods, begin filing on North Platte River water. The government will accept a filing any time, but only subject to former filings and appropriations. Nebraska farmers laughed when they discovered that Wyoming ranchers were making filings on their river. "We've got that solid," they said. "No use trying to get our river away from us." But the Wyoming filings continued until practically every drop of Platte river was filed on in Wyoming, subject only to the Nebraska filings. And Nebraska was not utilizing the water under the filings of its farmers.

Another exhibit tended to show that Mr. Perkins, Cyrus H. McCormick and Charles Deering held all stock of the International Harvester Company of America, the selling company of the International Harvester Company of New Jersey.

Although it sold $100,000,000 worth of farm implements, the International Harvester Company of America last year made but $150,000 in profits, or fifteen-hundredths of 1 per cent, according to R. C. Haskins, the president.

Questions were asked by the government attorneys to show that the International Harvester Company of America was merely the selling agent of the International Harvester Company of New Jersey and that the latter company was to make all the money.

Fourteen Dead Fifty Hurt In English Train Wreck

London Express Jumps Tracks and Hits Buttrass of a Bridge.

London, Sept. 18.—Fourteen persons were killed and about 50 seriously injured in an accident on the London & Northwestern railway at Dilton Junction, near Widnes, in Lancashire.

While going down a steep grade, the engine of an express train jumped the track and hit the buttrass of a bridge which spanned the road at this point. There was a terrific crash like an explosion and seven of the nine cars followed the engine. Every passenger in the first two cars was killed. The last two cars remained on the track and the passengers in these coaches were not seriously injured. The other seven cars turned over and caught fire. There was plenty of help at hand, but the flames prevented the immediate rescue of the penned-in passengers, and some were roasted to death in sight of the onlookers.

OHIO HAPPENINGS

To Prevent Spread of Smallpox.

Columbus, O., Sept. 18.—With a view to preventing the spread of smallpox from Pennsylvania to Ohio, Eugene M. McCampbell, secretary of the state board of health, appealed to the mayors of all border cities and towns of Pennsylvania and Ohio, urging them to use every means to prevent those exposed to the disease from entering Ohio. McCampbell urged that if necessary passengers of all trains bound for Ohio be examined before they be permitted to disembark in this state.

Clerk Alleged to Be "Short."

Columbus, O., Sept. 18.—State Examiner W. E. Heck reported to Attorney General Hogan that Ralph A. Argabright, clerk of Dayton police court, is short $1,800 in his accounts. Heck said that Argabright had received $28,673.84 in the past two years and accounted for but $26,873.76. The report alleges that larger cash bonds had been forfeited than reported by the clerk and that false commitment entries had been made.

Eggs a Nickel Apiece?

Columbus, O., Sept. 18.—Eggs at 5 cents apiece is the price which housewives may have to pay next winter, according to Professor F. S. Jacoby, head of the poultry department at Ohio State university. He attributes the probable soaring prices to the good rates paid for poultry last spring. Farmers and chicken raisers could afford better to sell their hens than to feed them for egg production.

Ends Life For Son's Sake.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 18.—Testimony introduced before Probate Judge Haden at the hearing on the appointment of a guardian for Edward Jackemy, 7, was that the father, Joseph Jackemy of Lakewood, former assistant secretary of the East Ohio Gas company, committed suicide in order that the boy might be left money to educate himself.

Diphtheria Epidemic.

Chardon, O., Sept. 18.—Public schools in Chardon, Burton and Middlefield, three principal towns in Geauga county, were closed because of a diphtheria epidemic which is raging in the neighboring townships. Twenty cases are reported in Burton. Many others are scattered through adjoining townships.

Contests Begin at Camp Perry.

Port Clinton, O., Sept. 18.—The Ohio state team matches open at Camp Perry today with the regimental team shoot. These matches will be shot on the 200, 600 and 1,000 yard ranges at slow fire, and at 200 yards rapid fire. The matches will conclude with a skirmish fire Thursday noon.

Tragedy on Blind Baggage.

Painesville, O., Sept. 18.—Charles Buerger and Fred Edwards, both of Erie, Pa., are wounded as the result of a shooting on the blind baggage of westbound Lake Shore train No. 43 as it was passing through Ashtabula. John Phillips, Toledo, who did the shooting, says the others tried to rob him.

Girls Faint as Boy Dies.

Zanesville, O., Sept. 18.—Walter Marlowe, 17, died to death in a local laundry before medical aid could reach him, following an accident when his left arm was torn off by a centrifugal drying machine. Nearly a score of girls in the laundry fainted.

charged with the murder of Rose Menschik Szabo, has arrived here. He is Franz Menschik, brother of the woman who was drowned in Greenwood lake, and he left his work in the Vienna postoffice to come to this country in an attempt to prove that Mrs. Szabo was his sister, that she possessed more than $10,000 at the time of her death, and that her mother, to whom she is supposed to have left her money, was dead when the woman's will was made.

When Dr. Fritz Fischerauer of the Austrian-Hungarian consulate had done talking with the postal clerk he seemed more than satisfied with what he had heard. He said that Franz had brought with him documents certified by the American consulate at Vienna that proved conclusively that Mrs. Szabo, who was drowned while rowing with the lawyer, was his sister, and that her mother was dead when the will was made.

When he had finished with Franz, Dr. Fischerauer climbed aboard a train for Middletown, where he wished to confer with District Attorney Rodgers and inform the county prosecutor of the latest developments in the case against the jailed lawyer.

Roosevelt In Arizona On Speaking Campaign

Talks About an Extra Session of Congress If Elected.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 18.—Colonel Roosevelt crossed the cactus-studded desert of Arizona to describe his policies to the people of this state and to tell them that he would lose no time in securing their enactment into law. At Tucson the colonel announced to an audience of 30,000 shirt-sleeved men and shirt-waisted women, Americans, half-breeds and Mexican-Americans, that if elected, and he finds he has a sufficient backing in congress, he will call an extra session next March and take the first steps toward the adoption of the social and industrial planks of the Progressive platform.

Regulars Win Out

New York, Sept. 18.—New York had its first real experience with the direct primary law and nominated candidates for assembly, congress, state senate and other offices by direct vote. The so-called "regulars," that is, the candidates designated by the various organizations, won all through the city and became the regular party nominees.

Mine Disaster in Germany.

Berlin, Sept. 18.—Twenty men were killed outright and a number of others wounded in the collapse of a partition in the Augusta Victoria colliery at Recklinghausen, in the Westphalian coal fields. Several miners who were pinned down by their limbs were taken to the surface weak from loss of blood. It is feared that some of them will die.

Shot by Highwayman.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 18.—Harry Schaeffer, a truck farmer, while on his way to this city with a load of produce, was shot and badly wounded by a negro highwayman near this city.

School Orders Closed.

Urbana, O., Sept. 18.—Two cases of meningitis, which developed among the pupils of the central school district of this city, resulting in one death, have led the health authorities to close the school building.

Cut Down Your Meat Bill

Edith Townsend Kaufmann in Leslie's says: The woman who is spending twenty-eight and thirty cents a pound for porterhouse steak is wantonly throwing away her husband's money, when she can serve him better and cheaper with cuts at eight and ten cents a pound. Of course, the secret of this radical economy lies in knowing how to treat these cheaper cuts. It takes practically no knowledge at all to merely order a steak or roast from the butcher and order the cook to prepare it for dinner. It does, however, require an intelligent understanding of the cheaper cuts, so that there is no question of less nourishment in supplying the family with the cheaper meat. Mr. Lapperque, who was chef of the Grand Pacific hotel, Chicago, says that cooking, reduced to a science, covers only three ways of preparing meats. The first is the application of intense heat, to keep in the juices, suitable only to portions of clear meat, where, where the fiber is tender. By the second method, the meats are put in cold water and cooked at a low temperature. This is suitable for bones, gristle and the toughest portions of the meat, which for this purpose should be divided into small bits. The third method is a sort of combination of the other two, dealing mostly with stewing meat, which is neither tender nor tough.

Plate meat, which is sold at ten cents a pound, has one objection—that of fatness. With, however, care in the matter of timely preparation, this can become the leading element in a delicious stew or pot roast. Of course you can't telephone your order to the butcher at 4 and serve your dinner at 6 if you wish to introduce the element of economy in the evolution of your meat dishes. For example, one treatment of a flank of beef, by no less a lady than the wife of a famous judge and one time Democratic candidate for the presidency, was to dredge it first entirely of bone. Then she rolled it, tied it with a string and pot roasted it. After this she set it out over night with a heavy weight. It was served cold for Sunday dinner, and, when cut thin with a very sharp knife, the butcher himself couldn't tell what it was, declaring it quite as palatable as turkey.

216 E. Court St. Both Phones. WE USE SOFT WATER

GRABS WESTERN RIVER $50,000 AT STAKE

The possession of water rights worth $50,000,000 may lead to a prolonged legal battle between two Western States, in which railroads may line up as well as extensive agriculturists, unless the present filings accepted long since are upheld immediately by the government.

Wyoming, in reality, is trying to grab a $50,000 river from Nebraska. It is the biggest river, except the Columbia, between the Missouri and the Pacific Coast, and upon its waters depend the prosperity of the entire western end of Nebraska. Wyoming is not simply after title to the river, but intends actually to take the water from between the banks and leave a dry watercourse extending three-quarters of the way across this entire state. Gov. Aldrich of Nebraska, the confederated commercial clubs of the state, Union Pacific Railroad and various other bodies have joined in an effort to stop the thief, and representatives have been rushed off to Washington to interest the Federal Government in behalf of the present owners of the stream.

May Cause Platte River to Go Dry.

The river, which is in such danger is the North Platte. Of the North and South Platte rivers, which combine at this point, the northern branch brings three or four times as much water to the confluence. With the North Platte diverted to other uses, the present Platte River, from the western end of the state to Platts mouth, on the Missouri will be but a dry tract of sand.

Wyoming claims that that state is in the right in the action which it is taking, and points to the fact that it is remaining strictly within the law while taking possession of the water. And there is no denying that fact, either.

North Platte River takes its rise in Wyoming and for several hundred miles flows through that state. Most of its water comes from the numerous streams which pour down Wyoming mountains and find their way into the North Platte before it enters Nebraska.

Nebraska Got Careless of Rights.

Some years ago there came a change in the climatic conditions of Western Nebraska, and, instead of dry seasons, sufficient rain fell to mature the crops. So the settlers did not use the river water. They did not have to irrigate to produce crops. Consequently they permitted their irrigation ditches to deteriorate and become almost unusable. They slept on their rights, in other words. And, under governmental law, these water rights must be used if they are to remain in force.

Then again did Wyoming farmers, who had been living by dry farming methods, begin filing on North Platte River water. The government will accept a filing any time, but only subject to former filings and appropriations. Nebraska farmers laughed when they discovered that Wyoming ranchers were making filings on their river. "We've got that solid," they said. "No use trying to get our river away from us." But the Wyoming filings continued until practically every drop of Platte river was filed on in Wyoming, subject only to the Nebraska filings. And Nebraska was not utilizing the water under the filings of its farmers.

$50,000,000.00 LOST ANNUALLY BY WAGE EARNERS.

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $50,000,000.00 in wages is lost annually to the American people as a direct result of colds. Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough and heal and soothe the sore and inflamed air passages. Cure your common colds quickly and prevent their developing into more serious conditions. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound contains no opiates. Is safe for children. Another exhibit tended to show that Mr. Perkins, Cyrus H. McCormick and Charles Deering held all stock of the International Harvester Company of America, the selling company of the International Harvester Company of New Jersey.

Although it sold $100,000,000 worth of farm implements, the International Harvester Company of America last year made but $150,000 in profits, or fifteen-hundredths of 1 per cent, according to R. C. Haskins, the president.

Questions were asked by the government attorneys to show that the International Harvester Company of America was merely the selling agent of the International Harvester Company of New Jersey and that the latter company was to make all the money.

Mr. Frank Miser, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Miser, of this city, met with a fatal accident while engaged in repairing a car at Blanchester Tuesday afternoon, suffering injuries from which death resulted a few hours later in a Columbus hospital. Mr. Miser, who had a great many friends and relatives in this city, was engaged with a gang of B. & O. workmen, and according to the information at hand was under a car engaged in making repairs. The car was jacked up and was on a siding, when a freight train bumped into it, throwing the car from the jacks and crushing the young man beneath it before he had warning of what was taking place.

Another man who was partly under the car at the time was also seriously injured, but it is believed that he will recover.

When the car fell, pinioning Mr. Miser beneath it, his hip was crushed and he suffered internal injuries. As quickly as possible the car was lifted from the prostrate man, and he was taken in charge by a physician, who placed him on the east-bound passenger train and sent him to Columbus, where he was placed in one of the hospitals and lingered between life and death until 4 o'clock Wednesday morning, when death relieved his sufferings.

Undertaker Murray was summoned to Columbus to take charge of the remains, and will return with them on the evening train.

The deceased leaves a widow and one child, a father, mother and other relatives, who are heart-broken over the untimely death of their loved one.

When the news reached his mother she became so critically ill that it was necessary to summon a physician who did all that could be done to aid her. She is still very ill.

Hauled Away Load of Hay

Monday night some unknown parties went to the farm of Joseph Hoppes near Eber and hauled away a load of hay, using a spring wagon to do the work.

Mr. Hoppes learned that some one was hauling his hay away and had the night patrolman to watch for the man, believing that he would come to this city. However the fellow was not located. Stealing hay is somewhat out of the ordinary in Fayette county, owing to the ease with which it can be traced.

DAYTON WHOLESALERS PAY CITY BRIEF VISIT

Forty of Dayton's Progressive Business Men Take Part in the Trade Excursion Which Passed
Through Washington--Surprise
Expressed Because City Has No Commercial Organization.

The Dayton Wholesalers' trade excursion, consisting of seven large touring cars containing more than forty prominent business men and citizens of Dayton, arrived in this city at 11:10 Wednesday morning, just one hour behind the schedule.

With Heidelberg's band in one of the foremost autos, announcing the arrival of the excursionists, the seven banner-bespangled autos swept down Main street to Court, and Court to North, returning to a point near the fountain corner, where a halt was made, and where the party were greeted by half a hundred local citizens and business men, no attempt having been made by the business men to meet the excursionists in a body.

After 20 minutes' visit with the citizens who had gathered about, the genial Daytonians bade farewell and left for Sabina, where they were to dine. They encountered some very heavy road between this city and Jamestown. More than one expressed surprise at the thriving appearance of Washington, and when informed that the city was without a commercial organization, some of the men expressed themselves of the belief that the city's most vital interests were being neglected through lack of such an organization.

After leaving Sabina the excursionists are scheduled to stop in Wilmington, Blanchester, Morrow, Lebanon and thence back to Dayton. They came to this city over the Jamestown pike.

Amateur Detective Was On Secret "Assignment"

An amusing incident occurred in the Cincinnati police court Tuesday at the expense of a Greenfield man who had been led astray by glaring inducements to be a detective, and who had willingly paid out $15 for the information and instructions on how to become a great detective.

The man was Gilbert Moler, formerly employed at the Greenfield Pad factory before his ambition to become a detective had induced him to give up a steady job to become a "gun heeler".

Moler was picked up by the Cincinnati police, the charge of carrying a big gun being lodged against him. In police court he said that his home was at Greenfield, and that he had been sent west on an "assignment," the nature of which he could not reveal, and that the great detective had cautioned him to be very secretive about his work. He had studied by correspondence.

A search of the man brought to light a badge about the size of a five-cent piece, bearing the inscription of "American Detective Association." Moler was given until six o'clock to leave Cincinnati, and advised to go back to the pad factory.

IN SOCIETY

A nuptial event of notable interest, by no means confined to the circles of Washington society, was the marriage of Mr. Cambridge Graham Beckel and Miss Helen Willis, daughter of Mrs. Carrie B. Willis, which was solemnized at the home of the bride at half-past eight o'clock Wednesday morning.

The marriage culminated a series of brilliant affairs in which young hostesses vied with each other to show Miss Willis honor and showed beyond words the popularity of the bride.

She is a lovely girl, having had many advantages and noted for her wit and the charm of her personality. A graduate of the Cincinnati Conservatory, she is an artistic musician, and her departure to a new home leaves a deplorable vacancy in both Washington's social and musical circles.

The bride-groom, belonging to an old Granville family, has been as prominent in social and university circles as the bride, and is a cultured attractive fellow who is proving a favorite with the men and maids of the bride's special coterie.

It was a wedding set apart by extreme beauty of decoration and arrangement and the perfection of its details.

The Willis home was embowered in Southern Smilax, festooning archways and windows, and a profusion of roses and snap dragons. The floors were covered with white linen.

The ceremony was performed in the reception room, its immense window embrasure converted into a luxuriant bower of Southern smilax, pink roses, rising on either side from tall vases of white and gold, and linked with gauze ribbons to gilt baskets of pink roses surmounting shorter white pedestals.

It was an ideal background for the beautiful bridal tableau, which formed after the Columbus harpist, Bonelli had concluded a half hour's program of beautiful nuptial music.

Leading the wedding procession down the stairs came two of the maids, Miss Frances Sparks, of Mt. Vernon, Ky., and Miss Sybil Hoover, of Gibson City, Ill., who carried the white gauze ribbons which formed the aisle.

Rev. A. W. West, of the First Baptist church, preceded the bridegroom and his best man, Mr. Joseph Crane, of Charleston, W. Va.

Following were two maids, Miss Florence Beckel, of Newark, the sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Lina Willis, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Pryor Ridgeway, of Dayton, matron of honor.

The maids were all similarly gowned in white lingerie dresses, with pink girdles and carried immense shower bouquets of pink roses and fern. The matron of honor also wore a lingerie gown of white over pink and carried a similar bouquet.

The bride entered on the arm of her brother, Mr. Willard Willis, and was a picture of girlish beauty.

Her Princess gown was of white silk crepe, with wide bands of Princess lace, carrying out the panel effect down the skirt. On her blonde hair was a cap of Princess lace and her bouquet, a shower of lilies of the valley, bride's roses and fern. She wore the bridegroom's gift, a diamond pendant, at her throat.

Sixty guests, confined to the younger set, and relatives witnessed the impressive ring ceremony performed by Rev. West.

After the reception the harpist played the Mendelssohn march and the bride and bridegroom led the way to the dining room, all in white and green.

The bridal table was beautiful, white center basket of bride's roses and maiden hair fern, surrounded by four smaller baskets.

Seated with the bridal party were Miss Corinne Warden, of San Antonio, Texas, Mr. Ridgeway, of Dayton; Mr. Verne Priest, of Newark; Mr. John Hislop, of Columbus; Mr. Clay Van Vorhis, of Newark.

Mr. Willard Willis found the ring, Mrs. Ridgeway the thimble, Miss Warden the collar button and Mr. Ridgeway the dime. Mrs. Horace Ireland caught the bouquet.

The bride's gifts to her maids were silver engraved powder pencils and the bride-groom's to the best man, a gold tie clasp.

The guests were seated at small tables, decorated with gift baskets of pink snap dragons and fern for an elaborate wedding breakfast.

Mrs. Ione Bryant proved her efficiency as cateress.

Eastman served.

The artistic decorations came from the hands of the Buck florists.

The bride's going away gown was a smart tailored suit of black broadcloth, with black velvet tailored hat; her corsage bouquet of pink and white.

Mr. and Mrs. Beckel left on the morning train for their new home on 407 Salem avenue, Dayton.

Mr. Beckel is connected with the J. C. Blair Paper Co., of Huntington, Pa.

They carry with them the good wishes of friends galore.

In addition to the out-of-town guests of the bridal party the guests from a distance were the groom's brother, Mr. Raymond Beckel, of Miami university; Miss Baur, of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music; Mrs. Roy Reeves, Columbus; Mrs. John Case, Greenfield; Miss Keith, Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Workman, Montgomery, Ala.; Miss Geiger, Troy.

Mrs. O. T. Grafton entertained with a Kensington and musical Tuesday afternoon, in compliment to Miss Margaret McClure, who leaves soon for her new home in Peebles, and Miss Anna Holmes, of Augusta, Ky.

It was an affair as charming as it was pretty. A color scheme of pink and white was effectively carried out in vases of asters and carnations, in graceful arrangement, and the favors for the honor guests were immense bouquets of pink and white carnations.

Sixty matrons and girls found the Climax of the afternoon's pleasure in a choice musical program, to which Miss McClure and Miss Holmes were generous contributors.

Miss McClure played several very beautiful compositions and Miss Holmes recited two musical numbers besides playing piano solos which again demonstrated the artistic talent which during her former residence here frequently captivated Washington audiences.

Mrs. Mary Goldsberry Burgett sang with much sweetness two lovely songs of Miss McClure's composition, one a late composition sung for the first time.

Mingling with the enjoyment of Miss McClure's music was a very genuine feeling of regret that Washington circles must soon lose this gifted young musician.

After the program Mrs. Grafton served a tempting collation and a huge bowl of punch, vine garlanded, was on tapis all afternoon on the verandah, Ruth Grafton and Marion Whelpley serving.

Also assisting in the afternoon's hospitalities were Mrs. Frank Rothrock, Mrs. James Whelpley and Miss Bess Kerr.

Mrs. Bales, Miss Fitzgerald, of London, and Mrs. Ralph Kah, of Sidney, were out-of-town guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Hays, Miss Dora Hays and Miss Myrtle Bonham chaperoned a jolly party to Crabill's park and gave their assistance to an unusually merry day, with "good eats" galore.

In the party were Misses Doris McFadden, Jane Saxton, Mary and Janet Weaver, Lucy Edna Pine, Katherine Foreman, Elizabeth DeWees, Myra Tharp, Georgia Bell and Helen Hays.

Misses Emily Palmer and Martha Teeters delightfully entertained the Merry-Go-Rounds at the Palmer home. A jolly melon feast was enjoyed by the girls of the club. Japanese lanterns lighted the spacious porch and golden rod and asters were used in decoration. An advertising contest was a feature of the evening, Helen Persinger winning the prize.

Mrs. Reynolds is in the city buying a large and fine line of millinery for Glicksman's Millinery department.

Springfield Team Want Championship

The football warriors who represent the Springfield high school during the coming fall will have one of the hardest schedules ever arranged for the wearers of the blue and gold. During the past week enough candidates for three teams have been coming out for practice, and Coach Walter Patton is much pleased with the material from which he will select a team to defend the honors of the local school.

A championship team is expected to be developed during the coming months, although speed will be the main feature on which the eleven will depend for long gains. Coach Patton is installing into the players the idea of reeling off the plays at the rate of ten a minute, and several changes will likely be made in the lineup as used last year.

Captain Stanley Netts will likely be shifted from left end to quarter back and Nye, another of last year's stars, will be placed in the back field. It is believed this shift will help much, as Netts would back up the line and could be used at quarter on the line plunges.

The position of left tackle, made vacant by the graduation of Long, last June, will likely be filled by either Mahr or Keifer, both of whom are working hard for the place. Ten of the players who won an "S" last year because of their work on the gridiron, are out for positions on the team. The men are: Netts, Rankin, Underwood, Williams, Titus, Moore, Nye, Acton, Bunting and Watkins.

Among the teams to be played this season will be Washington C. H. and Fostoria high school, both of which have strong teams. Neither of them have played in recent years. East high school of Columbus, the only team that defeated the local school last year, will also be tackled again this year. The alumni and varsity teams will play on Thanksgiving day, this card being a good drawing attraction last year.

The following is the complete schedule as arranged, and consists of ten games, five at home and five away. The games are: London high at London, September 28; Washington C. H. at Springfield, October 5; North high at Springfield, October 12; Washington C. H. high at Washington C. H., October 19; Stivers high, at Springfield, October 26; Troy high, at Troy, November 2; Steele high, at Dayton, November 16; East high, Columbus, at Springfield, November 16; Fostoria high at Fostoria, November 23; and Alumni with Varsity, November 28.—Springfield Sun.

THE PRETTIEST GIRL IN WASHINGTON C. H.

"My niece," said a well known man the other day, "is often called the prettiest girl in Washington. I believe half the compliments she gets are due to her shirt waists. They are always as clean and dainty looking as a snowflake. She's mighty particular about them. She won't use the cheap, ordinary rosin soaps for washing, but buys this 'Easy Task Soap' you hear so much talk about. It seems that 'Easy Task Soap' just naturally goes after the dirt and doesn't eat into and rot the fabrics like the common yellow rosin soaps. It costs the same—a nickel a cake."

How Edison Would Educate

Mr. Edison has outlined a plan for a series of some thousand of motion pictures to illustrate various branches of study, and, to carry these into effect, has added to his staff of workers a number of highly intelligent experts, each of whom has been carefully selected because of special knowledge in some particular direction. The force already includes specialists in astronomy, chemistry, natural philosophy, physics and many other subjects. An experienced photographer has been given carte blanche to take picture films in various parts of the world (to illustrate lessons in geography), and has been in Africa for some months on this work. Other men of like attainments will be added from time to time. With the staff and equipment at present available, Edison is prepared to make motion pictures to elucidate such studies as astronomy, bacteriology, botany, chemistry, entomology, forestry, geography, geology, history, horticulture, mechanics and mechanism, physics, technique of industries, arts and trades, and zoology; and the scope of his operations is constantly in process.

Plan Dedication Of Logan Elm

The State Historical and Archaeological society has set the date for the dedication of Logan Elm and park for Wednesday, October 2, and the ceremonies will be of great historical interest.

The first week in October Columbus will entertain the first congress of Indians and for the dedicatory ceremonies here the state society has secured for the speakers Hon. Charles E. Dagenett, a full blooded Ohio Indian, who is connected with the Indian office in Washington, D. C., and Mr. Frank Talmadge, of Columbus, a lineal descendant of Michael Cresap. Both are fine orators. Logan Elm is in Pickaway township and the drive thru the beautiful and fertile Pickaway plains. It is on a cross road west of Elmwood and east of Nash or one can take the traction line to Haysville. The walk from there is only about a mile and a half.

The urgent part in doctoring the tree for its preservation has been completed and those in charge of the work say that as it now stands it is good for 100 years.

It is expected that at least one hundred people will come down from Columbus and owners of automobiles are kindly asked to donate their machines to convey visitors to and from the park that day.

Mrs. Howard Jones is the local representative of the committee in charge of the arrangements and owners of automobiles can notify her.

The dedication undoubtedly will be a history making event in the county and every resident of old Pickaway should have enough civic pride to make it one that will attract former residents back to the old home.—Union Herald.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

When you see silverware scratched and tarnished with black stains and streaks in the interstices of the ornamental patterns, that is dirt, left there by common, cheap rosin soaps. It is better to use a soap that is antiseptic as well as a perfect cleansing agent. "Easy Task Soap," the hard, white laundry soap, will clean your silverware surely and quickly. It will get out the dirt the other soaps have left. Your grocer will sell you two cakes for ten cents, and if it doesn't satisfy you the makers will give back your dime.

You'll Be Welcome

WALK into our laundry at any time and inspect every detail of our establishment. We will be glad to show you around in order to convince you that our methods are up to date and based on the strictest sanitation. You will then realize why our work is the best in the city.

BUSH IS WONDERFUL PLAYER

Manager Harry Wolverton of New York Highlanders Would be Content If He Had Ownie.

Harry Wolverton has a very high opinion of "Bill" Louden as a baseball player. Loudon worked for Wolverton a few years ago and the Yank manager is well acquainted with the young player's ability.

"Louden is a seasoned ball player," said Wolverton. "I think he is above the average second sacker right now and with plenty of work he will round into a star that will outshine them all. In addition Loudon can hit about .250 and he is fast on the bases.

"But about Bush—why he's no good at all. He's slow and can't cover any ground. His whip is also poor—hey? Say, if I had that youngster I'd be satisfied with life. He is a wonderful little fielder and he is in the game all the time. The Detroit pitchers can thank Ownie Bush for the number of hits he robs opposing batsmen of in a season. Without Bush at short, I think the Tigers would not look so formidable."

Reorganize Highlanders.

The Highlanders are to be reconstructed around Birdie Cree, Ed Sweeney and Hal Chase. That's all that is left of the old team.

Veteran Fans Give Bill Lange Credit for Honor.

Californian Was Especially Clever in Going From First to Second—Had Big Advantage in His Tremendous Size.

Veteran fans will tell you that Bill Lange was the greatest base stealer of all time. Bill was especially great in going from first to second. He had everything figured down to a nicety. It's one of the A, B, C's of the game that the second baseman covers the bag if a left-field hitter is at bat and the short-stop, if the batter is a notable right-field swatter. Every man has his tendencies toward plugging the ball a certain direction.

When Lange was on first he would stand flat-footed off the sack a few feet and watch the man who was expected to cover second. As a catcher is liable to throw wide or high the expectant tagger always glances around to see whether the center fielder is going to back him up. This was the time Bill Lange started his steal. He would have the opposition off guard momentarily. The short-stop or second baseman, glancing over his shoulder, would be delayed a trifle and Bill would be coming down the line like a streak. His tremendous size and force when he slid into second made him feared, anyway, so he had every advantage in his favor. It was his selection of psychological moments in a game that made Bill Lange such a power in the sport.

Mike Kelly of "Slide, Kelly, Slide" fame was perhaps the fastest starter on stealing bases the game has developed. He could stand stock still and then develop top speed in a couple of steps. The advantage of this is obvious. Kelly inaugurated many plays in baseball which are being used today.

When Kelly and John Clarkson, the great pitcher of his time, were sold to Boston for $10,000 apiece they set the record for the highest price ever paid for ball players up to their time.

There always has been a standing dispute whether King Kelly or Buck Ewing was the greatest catcher. It never will be decided satisfactorily. Ewing also contributed many new ideas to the game. Tom Burns, one time manager of the Chicago Colts, says it was Ewing who first ran into the diamond to get a thrown ball from the outfield when Kelly was sliding home, and whipped it back to second, clearing the bases of runners. Ewing had it figured out in a flash that Kelly had eight chances out of ten in scoring because of his terrific, twisting slide, and he took a chance of retiring the runner at second. This play has come down to our generation and is often used when the man coming home cannot be retired.

Manager Detroit Tigers, Who is Regarded as Perhaps the Best Short-stop of All Time, and One of the Greatest of Baseball Leaders.

There never is a doubt in my mind as to the biggest mistake of my baseball career, and this spring I have thought about it more than I ever did. This blunder was my failure to take a tip of a friend out in Idaho and get Walter Johnson a couple of months before Washington ever heard of him. My friend's report was too good to be true, and I came to the conclusion that he, like the rest of us, was letting his enthusiasm run away with his judgment. I guess Walter would fit in bad with Detroit just now!

But I suppose the thing you want is about the worst mistake I ever made on a ball field. I expect the spectators can tell you a lot worse ones on me, but the worst blunder in my entire career, according to my own way of thinking, was one I made during the strenuous days of 1897 and 1898 when Baltimore and Boston were about equal in strength and always battling with each other. I have forgotten which year it happened in, but I never have forgotten my mistake. How I came to make it I never could explain, except on the grounds that after thinking out the entire situation and knowing exactly what to do, I lost my head at the critical instant.

and the series, and seemingly the season, hung upon the result of the game. We came down to the ninth inning one run to the good and fighting every inch of the way to hold our advantage. We failed to score in the ninth, and Boston came in for the final effort, still one to the bad, and forced runners to second and third with only one man out. That compelled us to pull the infield in to keep them from tying the score. The play of course was to the plate. I knew the habits of the batter, and as I came in I caught the catcher's signal and edged up closer to the third baseman, calculating that if he hit that kind of a ball at all the batter would pull it toward third, and there would be two of us up there with a chance to get it. I figured exactly right. He pulled the ball hard between short and third, and if I had played where I ordinarily would have done, the ball would have gone through for a clean base hit. As it was, the ball came straight at me, bounding well, and I fumbled it and allowed the tying score to go home. A fumble even under those circumstances is not a blunder; it is part of the game; but this time I evidently lost my head, forgot what I was doing, and as the ball rolled back I jumped for it. The runner coming from second was rounding third, and all I would have had to do was to toss the ball there and stop it at a tie. Instead, I leaped onto that ball, grabbed it and threw toward first. It was too

No Catcher on Connie Mack's Staff Could Handle Spitball Save Cleveland—Became Excessively Wild and Ineffective.

Many are the reasons advanced for the failure of Cy Morgan, the Athletics' spitball artist, to stick in the league this season, but not one of them has hit the nail fairly on the head. Surprising as it may seem, Morgan's fate was curiously linked with that of Paddy Livingston, the little catcher who was sold to Cleveland.

The love for automobiling and other things may have contributed to Morgan's downfall, but the prime cause was the sending of Paddy Livingston to Cleveland. All Morgan's good work in 1910 and 1911 can be traced to the handling of Livingston.

No other catcher on the Athletics' staff could or would handle Morgan, nor did Connie Mack care to take a chance with Lapp and Thomas catching such an erratic spitball pitcher as Morgan. As a consequence he was teamed up with Livingston, who had handled all kinds of spitball pitchers and who did not fear them. Then, too, he was only the third string catcher, and was worth taking a chance on.

When Livingston left the team it was freely predicted that Morgan would lose his effectiveness. The big twirler started the season auspicious-

As a result Morgan went from bad to worse in his pitching, became excessively wild and lost effectiveness with his spitball. This latter delivery is his strong forte. In fact, no pitcher has a better "spitter" than Cy when properly handled.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

When you see silverware scratched and tarnished with black stains and streaks in the interstices of the ornamental patterns, that is dirt, left there by common, cheap rosin soaps. It is better to use a soap that is antiseptic as well as a perfect cleansing agent. "Easy Task Soap," the hard, white laundry soap, will clean your silverware surely and quickly. It will get out the dirt the other soaps have left. Your grocer will sell you two cakes for ten cents, and if it doesn't satisfy you the makers will give back your dime.

You'll Be Welcome

BUSH IS WONDERFUL PLAYER

Manager Harry Wolverton of New York Highlanders Would be Content if He Had Ownie.

Harry Wolverton has a very high opinion of "Bill" Loudon as a baseball player. Loudon worked for Wolverton a few years ago and the Yank manager is well acquainted with the young player's ability.

"Loudon is a seasoned ball player," said Wolverton. "I think he is above the average second sacker right now and with plenty of work he will round into a star that will outshine them all. In addition Loudon can hit about 250 and he is fast on the bases.

"But about Bush—why he's no good at all. He's slow and can't cover any ground. His whip is also poor—he's slow. If I had that youngster I'd be satisfied with life. He is a wonderful little fielder and he is in the game all the time. The Detroit pitchers can thank Ownie Bush for the number of hits he robs opposing batsmen of in a season. Without Bush at short, I think the Tigers would not look so formidable."

Reorganize Highlanders.
The Highlanders are to be re-constructed around Birdie Cree, Ed Sweeney and Hal Chase. That's all that is left of the old team.

Veteran Fans Give Bill Lange Credit for Honor.

Californian Was Especially Clever in Going From First to Second—Had Big Advantage in His Tremendous Size.

Veteran fans will tell you that Bill Lange was the greatest base stealer of all time. Bill was especially great in going from first to second. He had everything figured down to a nicety.

It's one of the A. B. C's of the game that the second baseman covers the bag if a left-field hitter is at bat and the shortstop, if the batter is a notable right-field swatter. Every man has his tendencies toward plugging the ball a certain direction.

When Lange was on first he would stand flat-footed off the sack a few feet and watch the man who was expected to cover second. As a catcher is liable to throw wide or high the expectant tagger always glances around to see whether the center fielder is going to back him up. This was the time Bill Lange started his steal. He would have the opposition off guard momentarily. The shortstop or second baseman, glancing over his shoulder, would be delayed a trifle and Bill would be coming down the line like a streak. His tremendous size and force when he slid into second made him feared, anyway, so he had every advantage in his favor. It was his selection of psychological moments in a game that made Bill Lange such a power in the sport.

Mike Kelly of "Slide, Kelly, Slide" fame was perhaps the fastest starter on stealing bases the game has developed. He could stand stock still and then develop top speed in a couple of steps. The advantage of this is obvious. Kelly inaugurated many plays in baseball which are being used today.

Dr. P. J. Henness, who is moving to Washington C. H., this week, tells us of a keep-sake which he values very highly. On his recent trip to Europe, one of the most interested members of the party was a Miss Divens, whose home was at Good Hope, Fayette county. While on the voyage home, Dr. Henness, who had charge of the funds of the party, turned over to Miss Divens a part of her money, included in which amount was a five dollar gold piece. It seems that the lady did not spend this particular coin, and brought it home with her. A short time since she was stricken with a fatal disease, and passed away last week. It was her request that the doctor have charge of the funeral services, and he went to Good Hope, on Friday, for that purpose. After the service, her brother gave Dr. Henness the five dollar gold piece, saying that it was among the last requests of the lady that it be given him after her death.—Sabina Tribune.

Pennsy Planning For Heavy Trains

The local branch of the Pennsylvania railroad is going quietly about the work of bringing the road up to a point where much heavier trains may be run over it than at the present time, and to do this new ballast, heavier steel, and new bridges are required.

At many points along the road gangs of men are busy replacing wooden bridges, laying heavier steel and re-ballasting the road bed. Within a short time a new steel bridge will be completed over Compton creek in this county. Near Sabina the reballasting has been under way for some time, and near Wilmington heavier steel has already been laid.

It is expected that within the next year or two some through trains will be put on the Zanesville division, and that both engine and coaches will be much larger than the present light-weights.

Dr. P. J. Henness, who is moving to Washington C. H., this week, tells us of a keep-sake which he values very highly. On his recent trip to Europe, one of the most interested members of the party was a Miss Divens, whose home was at Good Hope, Fayette county. While on the voyage home, Dr. Henness, who had charge of the funds of the party, turned over to Miss Divens a part of her money, included in which amount was a five dollar gold piece. It seems that the lady did not spend this particular coin, and brought it home with her. A short time since she was stricken with a fatal disease, and passed away last week. It was her request that the doctor have charge of the funeral services, and he went to Good Hope, on Friday, for that purpose. After the service, her brother gave Dr. Henness the five dollar gold piece, saying that it was among the last requests of the lady that it be given him after her death.—Sabina Tribune.
